The very word "HOMEWORK" can bring a conditioned response of butterflies in the stomach for the most organized and motivated of people. Imagine what the response may be like for someone who has a learning disability or an executive functioning delay. In contrast, the word "HOME" is more likely to bring a conditioned response of relief and safety. This presentation will focus on bringing a little more "HOME" to the homework routine as we navigate ways to eliminate the stress, discouragement and discomfort commonly associated with homework.
